THE EXHIBITION: Introduction

---

“Escala 1:1” is the title assigned by Ixone Sádaba to this exhibition.

A 1:1 scale means the displayed items are life-sized.

The exhibition is a collection of photographs
of the remains of the Lemoiz nuclear power plant.

The Lemoiz power plant in Bizkaia was built in the Basordas Cove between 1972 and 1984.

It never became operational.

The history of the power plant was marked
by violence and civil unrest.

Today, only remnants of large concrete blocks remain,
on the verge of disappearing.

“ESCALA 1:1”: A photographic research of Lemoiz heritage, symbolism and politics

Access to the remains of the Lemoiz power plant has been closed to the public.

Ixone wanted to bring pieces
of the structure into the Alhóndiga,
and she did this by projecting
life-size photographs on the walls.

It is a present-day invitation
to initiate a public debate
on the memory of this place.

Ixone Sádaba has been gathering material
and researching the power plant
for the last 4 years.

Her exhibition includes images of:

- The ruins of the power plant and surrounding area.

An overlook was built en 1974
from which people could watch
the progress of the construction.

Ixone Sádaba brings it
into the middle of the exhibition hall
as a place to view the past,
present and future of the Lemoiz facilities.
